

USE OF FORCE REVIEW In the Body-Worn Camera Era

Video Evidence and Human Performance

A force review demands more than pressing play.

Learn a structured approach to reviewing use-of-force incidents through video evidence, human performance, policy, and the totality of the circumstances. Real incidents and guided exercises connect technical concepts to the decisions supervisors make.

WHAT YOU WILL LEARN

Review video evidence. Understand frame rate, compression, missing frames, camera angle, and slow-motion playback.

Account for human performance. Examine attention, perception, reaction time, stress, and memory.

Recognize review bias. Identify hindsight, confirmation bias, and the risks of judging an incident from a single frame.

Weigh the complete evidence. Compare footage with reports, officer statements, physical evidence, and agency policy.

Explain your conclusions. Distinguish training needs, policy concerns, and potential misconduct, then document defensible findings.

FEBRUARY 18, 2027

8:30 AM–4:30 PM

BUCKS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

LEARN FROM FORCE REVIEW PRACTITIONERS

Lt. Matthew Botterbusch

Developed Delaware's first full-time Force Review and Analysis Unit.

Sgt. Sean Ryan

Reviews hundreds of use-of-force incidents annually.

John String

ACG co-founder bringing command-level, policy, and internal investigations experience.

FOR WHO

For supervisors, command staff, and personnel responsible for reviewing force.

ONE-DAY COURSE
$295 PER PARTICIPANT

Bucks County Public Safety Training Center
1760 South Easton Road, Doylestown, PA 18901

COURSE INFORMATION

aspirantllc.com/training
info@aspirantllc.com

